

How Nintendo handles your data

During the application process, your documents will first be handled by our HR department. Should your application fit the requirements for the position, your data will be forwarded to the relevant department. During the hiring process, the documents will also be made available to the works council for a check. This is part of the works council's co-determination rights. If you indicate an interest in a position with a Nintendo corporate company (European or worldwide), Nintendo can forward your data to the relevant departments in accordance with the German Data Protection Law (BDSG). Should your application be rejected by Nintendo or withdrawn by you, your information will be deleted roughly six months after the application process has been concluded, in accordance with legal data storage deadlines.